Do I Need to Update My Will If I Move Out-of-State?

Did you know that six of the 13 fastest growing cities in the nation are in Texas – including Frisco and McKinney? If you are used to fighting rush hour traffic during your work commute, you might not be surprised by that statistic; the growth DFW is experiencing is just incredible. Chances are, either you are new to Texas yourself, or you have a neighbor, friend or family member who has just relocated here. We serve clients every day who have come from all over the country and beyond, and some common questions we receive have to do with whether estate planning documents need to be updated when moving from state to state. You may have been wondering about this as well; here are some things you'll want to know.
